Paragraphs of the Week

Donn Fendler, 12-year-old Rye, N. Y., Boy Scout, lost on Mount Katahdin since July 17, emerged from the wilderness late Tuesday and his cries attracted Nelson Mo-Moarn, proprietor of a sporting camp. It is believed he traveled 35 miles.

The body of Miss Marion L. Gordon, 23, of Gorham, Maine, who was believed accidentally drowned while wading in the mill pond at Fort Hill Monday night, was recovered early Tuesday morning.

High tension wires claimed the lives of two Maine men Monday. Donald Young, 26, of China was killed when his head accidentally touched a power line when he was standing atop a railroad tank car, testing the temperature of a car-load of tar, and Corbett Marshall, 38, of Fairfield, lineman for the Central Maine Power Co., was killed when he came in contact with a high voltage line.

During a heavy electrical shower in North Waterford last Thursday afternoon, hail stones described as large as marbles pelted the village for an hour, badly damaging crops and clipping tops of huge maple trees.

The recreation building in Quoddy Village, Eastport, was destroyed by fire early Monday with an estimated loss of $35,000.

Dr. Francis E. Townsend, founder of the Townsend National Recovery Plan, is expected to speak before the Townsend Clubs in Maine early in August.

Serious crop loss is feared unless New England has a heavy rain soon. Farmers report their losses running into thousands of dollars with prospects of heavy blight to corn crop.

The United States served notice Wednesday night that it is terminating its 1911 trade treaty of commerce and navigation with Japan. Action will open the way toward an embargo on shipment of raw materials to that country.

Rev. Gerould Goldner, 29, of Ohio, kidnapped for a week by an Arabian band, was set free and found riding on a donkey toward Jerusalem Tuesday. District Commissioner Keith Roach, who discovered the young pastor while riding in his automobile, rushed him to his father in the Holy City.

The Lea Bill, which brings all forms of transportation except aviation under jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission, was passed by the House Wednesday. The bill aims to extend federal regulations to railroads, motor truck lines and inland water carriers and to set a program designed to end unfair competition.

France and Britain are confident they will soon reach an agreement with Soviet Russia. They seem willing to share military secrets with Moscow for the first time.

MAJOR COE CHAIRMAN PUBLICITY BUREAU PROGRAM IN COUNTY

A statement of endorsement from Governor Lewis O. Barrows, announcement of four county chairmen, including Major George C. Coe of Lovell as chairman for Oxford County, for the Greater Service Program of the State of Maine Publicity Bureau, were announced today as leaders of the state-wide organization aimed at an early start in the membership solicitation phase of the program.

Harry J. Buncke, assistant general manager and chief engineer of the Oxford Paper Co., Inc., of Rumford, and E. B. Jackson of Norway, have accepted community chairmanships and will be associated with Major Coe in the Oxford County work for the Publicity Bureau.

Major Coe, a graduate of Stanford University, is a Past Commander of the Frank W. Shaw Post, No. 137, American Legion, of Fryeburg and a Past State Executive Committeeman. He is a member of the Reserve Officers Association and now is vice-president and delegate to Puerto Rico Convention.

Active in community life, he has been vice-president and president of the Fryeburg-Lovell Kiwanis Club and Lieutenant Governor of the eighth division of the New England District of Kiwanis. He is a retired farmer.

Governor Barrows explained the publicity functions of the Bureau and the Development Commission, showed the separation of their activities and urged support of the Bureau's Greater Service Program.

Governor Barrows' complete statement follows.

"Developing and servicing Maine's recreational business is undoubtedly one of the most important duties we owe to our visitors, our State and ourselves. This duty is being met by two worthy organizations: The Maine Development Commission and the State of Maine Publicity Bureau.

"The Publicity Bureau, established in 1922, is a private agency, operated not for profit and for the purpose of giving authentic, specific, unbiased information on the various details of planning vacations in Maine.

"The Development Commission, established in 1925, is a department of the State Government, its responsibility being to plan and direct the expenditure of the State advertising and publicity appropriation including the preparation of advertisements, booklets and folders describing the many attractions of the entire State of Maine.

"Inquiries developed by its industrial, agricultural and products-of-the-sea activities are handled by the Commission. Inquiries concerning recreational and vacation attractions are referred by the Commission to the Bureau.

"Thus we have two separate organizations working throughout the entire year to bring visitors to Maine and to develop generally our largest industry, the tourist business. The Development Commission, financed by the State Government, advertises and solicits Maine's vacation attractions; the Publicity Bureau, privately financed, follows through when interest is shown and cultivates the interest by personal and mail contacts with prospective and actual visitors.

"Certainly we all approve the work of these agencies. Certainly we are pleased to learn that the Publicity Bureau is embarking upon a Greater Service Program. It has served the State well. Now, with increased support from Maine citizens, corporations, stores, groups and organizations it will continue to serve with an even more productive program."

THURSDAY, JULY 27, 1939

An editorial in a recent issue of the Boston Post cited the initiative shown by a small New Hampshire town in organizing a committee to draw new industries to the place.
Says the Post, this proves "in ample fashion that the old New England spirit of 'go-getting' is far from dead. It is a healthy sign to see one more community united for the common good."

Bethel has many advantages to offer, including vacant desirable mill properties, excellent rail connections to the West, and labor skilled in the manufacture of wood products. Industries are continually moving and Bethel should bid for her share. With hundreds of New England communities in the contest, it is only through the cooperation of every person interested in the town's welfare that any progress can be made. Work of this nature is apt to be delegated to the Chamber of Commerce, or any group willing to tackle the problem.
But many a time an opportunity may come to the attention of other parties to extol their town's merits or at least pass the word to a Chamber of Commerce official.

It is the duty of everyone to push their home town's interests; and they can't get around it with a clear conscience. If YOU learn of any likely prospect for new business and cannot contact them at once, just pass the word to the Chamber of Commerce or the Citizen, and the clue will be followed up.

IT'S GETTING CLOSER

The SNAPSHOT GUILD
CAMERA ON THE FARM

Better farm records can be kept with the camera. One clear picture is worth many words—and record pictures such as this are easy to take.

CAMERAS as farm implements—that seems a novel idea. And yet, on any progressive farm, a camera can render unique, highly practical service.

I am not referring to snapshots for pleasure. Of course, everybody knows there are innumerable snapshot opportunities on a farm—beautiful sunset shots across the tilled fields, pleasant pasture scenes with stock grazing or drinking from a cool stream, story-tellers snaps such as a hen mothering her brood—all sorts of chances, at any season.
But there's another aspect to farm photography—the extremely valuable, practical aspect of keeping farm records.

Clear, detailed records play an important part in farm operations today, and usually pictures can make these records even more clear and serviceable. If your lower sixty acres makes a good crop this year, a picture will prove it. If hail damages the roof of your new barn, a picture can show the exact nature and extent of the damage. Records of livestock growth, new building construction, crops and crop diseases, planting and harvesting operations, new equipment—all these,
and more, can well be kept in picture form.

Such records are especially useful because a good clear picture is more informative and convincing than a written description. Pictures are easier and quicker, too. For example, see how long it takes you to write a description of your prize bull that is as good as one clear picture.

You don't have to be a skilled photographer to take good farm record pictures, and any well-made, moderately-priced camera will do the job. A focusing model is most convenient, as with it both "closeups" and general views can be taken easily. An anastigmat lens is preferable, but it need not be an extremely fast one. The camera should take pictures of convenient size for viewing.

Excellent booklets on farm photography are now available through 4-H club sources. The best of these booklets not only give easily-understood instruction on photography, but also provide detailed advice on how to keep picture records of certain types—such as livestock and crop growth. They are extremely useful for the beginner at farm photography.

Start now to keep picture records of your farm operations, supplementing your written records.
They're inexpensive, easy to maintain, and have real value—both current and future.

"THEY TELL ME"

You know it seems kind of funny and it is also pitiful the way some of us natives botch up the job of showing our summer folks how to get the most out of their visit in Maine. I bet half the town folks that are in sight on the streets and roads don't know or don't care where the numbered routes of travel are whereabouts if they do they don't know where they lead to. They can tell anybody how to get some place, after a fashion. But when they see the party still circling round town half an hour later they think they must be dumb. But the dumb feller isn't always the stranger. Let's polish up a little and it will be easier for us to tell 'em and for them to listen. Perhaps they will want to stay then, or come again.

Famous Mangrove Swamp

One of the largest mangrove swamps in the world is in the southwestern Everglades. In places the forest extends five or more miles inland. The soils here are mostly raw, fibrous peat, frequently over 12 feet deep, indicating that organic debris has accumulated over a long period. It is probable, says a Carnegie report, that many thousands of formerly small mangrove islands of the region grew together to form mangrove land, thereby pushing further and further into the Gulf of Mexico.

Wearing the Monocle

Although the "traditional Englishman" is always portrayed abroad as wearing a monocle and many Englishmen do, in fact, favor a single eyeglass, the custom is a Continental one rather than English, says Pearson's London Weekly. Contrary to general belief, most monocles are not worn merely as ornaments (except by dandies), but are actually single eyeglasses. It was once supposed that a glass for one eye would also reduce the strain on the other eye.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Loomis and son Henry of Claverack, N. Y., were overnight guests of Mrs. Lena Wight and family Wednesday.
Today, accompanied by Mrs. Wight and William Wight they went to Rangeley, where they will be overnight guests of Mr. and Mrs. George Pillsbury.

Mr. and Mrs. Homer Crockett and family of Belmont, N. H., were week-end guests of her mother, Mrs. L. A. Sumner. Phyllis Crockett, who has spent the past two weeks with her grandmother, returned home with them. Mrs. Sumner also returned with them to enter the Laconia hospital for treatment.

The following party enjoyed a deep sea fishing trip off Orr's Island Sunday: Mr. and Mrs. Myron Bryant, Dr. and Mrs. R. O. Hood, Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Taylor, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Chapman, Miss Joyce to 300 pounds and they all enjoyed a shore dinner at the Rock Oven, Bailey's Island.

of the Newton, Mass., Graphic, Robert E. Mandell, Miss Emeline A. Day
Miss Frances A. Carter of Newton, of Portsmouth, N. H., enjoyed lun-

Miss Carter's uncle, Herbert Carter. The party spent the night at the Brick End House, Middle Intervale, guests of Miss Carter's niece, Miss Rebecca W. Carter, and returned to their homes Wednesday.

Wild Hare, Squirrel, Pests

In the Eighteenth century wild hare and squirrels were not highly regarded by sportsmen because they were so plentiful that they became pests, with bounties on their heads, says the American Wildlife Institute. In one year—1749—800 pounds were paid out for the heads of gray and black squirrels at three pence a head in Pennsylvania alone.
This means that 600,000 were killed for the price on their heads.

TRUTH about ADVERTISING

By CHARLES B. ROTH

BUT IT'S JUST AS GOOD

YOU have had the experience, haven't you, of going into some stores and asking for an advertised brand of goods, only to have the clerk hand you another brand and inform you, "But it's just as good."

Sometimes, to your regret, you bought the "just as good" item but sometimes you walked out of the store and searched until you found the merchandise you had asked for in the first place. When you got it you were satisfied.

You had confidence in the advertised goods, because you read in the honest pronouncements of the advertiser what you might expect his product to do for you. This gave you assurance. You bought because you had confidence.

But when that clerk palmed off something different on you, you had misgivings, you had doubts, you had fears, you had lack of confidence.

Maybe they were justified. Maybe they were not. It doesn't matter. The fact remains that advertising had invested the advertiser's goods with a confidence which made your buying a pleasant in place of a fearful duty.

Usually, but not always, these "just as good" goods are not as good—they are inferior and the merchant sells them because they carry more profit for him. He does his level best to get rid of them, because it is more to his advantage to do so than it is to yours.

Many stores pay their salesman a commission for selling unknown and unadvertised goods, because the salesman would not sell them without some special inducement.

It is much better for you as a consumer to put your reliance absolutely in advertised goods and in stores which advertise, and to patronize both exclusively.

When a man advertises his goods and tells frankly and publicly what they will do for you, he seeks your patronage on the basis of actual value.

It may be that some manufacturers or merchants can offer just as good value in unknown or unadvertised goods. But the chances are ten to one that they can't—because advertising not only increases the distribution of goods, but at the same time increases the production, so that advertised goods cost less to make; hence, gives more to the buyer.

In the long run you get more for your money when you buy advertised goods. You get more in actual value. And also get more in that intangible value, known as confidence.

And confidence is one of the chief satisfactions of life.

CASH PRIZES

The CITIZEN offers an opportunity for industrious workers to engage in a profitable occupation during the month of August. In the territory adjoining Bethel there are numerous homes in which this newspaper is not a regular visitor, and in which a representative of the paper has never called. It is our desire to cover this area during the coming month, and to do this effectively we shall offer attractive commissions, and prizes to the leaders at the end of the month.

Before starting work it will be necessary for the interested parties to learn full particulars at the CITIZEN office or by mail and obtain receipt books and sample copies, which will be ready on Monday, July 31.

Those who undertake this work may put in as much time as they wish, so that it will not interfere with other employment, and will find a large field of prospects in visitors and former residents who are here at this time of the year. Our principal point at this time, however, is to introduce the CITIZEN into as many year-round homes in the vicinity as possible and a more attractive payment is offered for these new subscriptions.

The Saga of a Home-Made Trailer; Texas to the New York World's Fair

A Texas journalist built himself a trailer, loaded in his wife and 11-year-old son and started on a 2,000 mile trek for the New York World's Fair with $50.00 in his pockets. His experiences are recounted in the following story:

By TOM CAUFIELD

(who covers police, fire alarms, boll weevils and all news in and about the Brazos Bottoms of Central Texas for the Waco Times-Herald).

WORLD'S FAIR, New York—Frances and the eleven-year-old and I have seen the Fair and all the folks back in Waco told us it couldn't be done on the Caufield bankroll. The speedometer on Ancient History II reads 2,000 miles from Fifth and Austin; the wallet is out $50, and we've got $10 left. I've just wired the boss for the $25 he promised me to get home on, and if the chewing gum and balling wire on the trailer and jalopy don't relax their holds during the homeward 2,000 miles, we shall have made the whole junket on $85.

We spent a little over $1.50 each per day on the Fair itself, counting admission at the gates. Thomas, the eleven-year-old and Frances, the woman who tells me how to drive, and I walked and walked and looked and stared, finally becoming convinced that the best parts of the Fair are free. We could while away two weeks here looking at the free shows, and never repeat and never suffer from what the slick paper writers call ennui. We are leaving only because a wolf is howling at a door bearing the coat of arms of a certain small town newspaperman in Texas.

Nothing Like the Brazos

We stood and gulped when we saw the illumination at the lagoon of nations last night. Nothing like that along the Brazos, nor anywhere else.

A lightning bolt hit a telephone post as our car-trailer combination passed it on the road to Knoxville, coming up. It smashed the post, splattered our car with splinters, made an outrageous noise, scared us stiff. We saw it all over again, free, at the General Electric show here. They made 10 million volts for us—BANG! and we thought we were back on the Tennessee highway in the storm.

We fought good roads and bad coming up. General Motors showed us all good in a panorama that 27,000 people a day look at. GM parked us in upholstered chairs, started a public address explanation from the chair arms, and showed us the highway system of 1960.

If it hadn't been for that roads

Here is Tom Caufield's homemade trailer in which he, his wife and son traveled all the way from Waco, Tex., to see New York World's Fair.

system display, we might have thought, in the aviation building, that man was fixing to leave the ground for good; but GM gave us hope for the highways. We could hardly get the boy away from the aviation display. Instead of wanting to ride on the carnival gadgets, he wanted to go back and look at the model wind tunnels, the cross section of the Yankee clipper, and things like that.

Need for Adjectives

We heard the Voder. That's a contraption we had read about, a sort of talking typewriter. Pretty girl punches keys and make a combination of hisses and grunts that sounds like Charlie McCarthy at his worst, but is understandable.

I never was much on adjectives. The one adjective needed around here is "marvelous." Give me enough synonyms for that, insert them as needed, and that's the Fair.

There's a moving mural in the Ford building. Pistons, cogs, things like that fixed in the wall, all moving. Time for one of the synonyms. In the same building, walls hung all round with a one-piece yellow curtain made of spun and woven glass.

More free stuff; the City of Light, with 100,000 individual bulbs; the Forward March of America, showing how lighting has changed. They've got a fountain running over the exit of that building, and when I lost Frances and Thomas, by getting mixed up on a rendezvous, they waited an hour for me there, perfectly satisfied, while the fountain splashed outside.

They've got a real ship parked in a pond by the New England building. They've got life-sized toy monkeys climbing trees in a toy exhibit and real monkeys climbing on a rock inside the Frank Buck enclosure. The rock is higher than the bamboo walls, so you can see the monkeys without going in.

Escalators and Ramps

About transportation; this fair is great on saving shoe leather. It has to be, it is so big that unless there were a lot of escalators and moving belts the cobbler would have a field day at every exit. You go up into the Perisphere on an escalator, and ride around it on a moving belt; and there's the moving belt at the GM building. Everywhere you find ramps instead of steps, and the ramps are exactly calculated to ease your legs as you go up or down. Streets and walks are asphalt, and the buildings generally have rubber composition flooring. And if you want to ride, it costs a dime for a bus from any point on the grounds to any other point.

If your feet do get tired (and they oughtn't to often if you've got the right kind of shoes, which is important, especially to the women) you can stop in at any of the first aid stations and get a free foot treatment to ease them.

Now for the Tariff

Let's count the cost, after you get to New York. Figure you're in a trailer—that's $1 to get over the George Washington Bridge, which is the best way for a trailer; 75 cents a night at the trailer camp; a few cents for milk and whatever other groceries you need for eating at the camp; 25 cents toll over

Whitstone Bridge for your car (leave the trailer at camp) and 25 cents toll back again (or ride a bus, fare ten cents each); 50 cents to park in the parking grounds at the Fair; 75 cents admission for adults, 25 cents for children; 25 cents each for the Perisphere, which is a must because it is the Fair's symbol; 10 cents for the Town of Tomorrow, which also ought to be a must for any householder, and gas and oil.

We ate dinner at one of many restaurants in the Fair grounds. My wife had chicken and mushrooms with coffee for 60 cents. I ate a Salisbury steak with coffee for 60 cents, and lamb chops for the boy cost 75 cents. For lunch we had hamburgers and pie, which ran us 20 cents each. It costs a nickel for pop or root beer at any of a dozen stands. We got to the Fair for lunch one day and had dinner there that night. We had breakfast in camp next day, lunch at the Fair and pulled out late that afternoon for home.

Seeing New York

You can see something of New York while you're at the Fair, for the mere cost of gasoline. The night we arrived, we took a 50-mile drive across town, along the Hendrik Hudson Parkway and back from the Battery up Broadway to Times Square, then back to camp. We had a volunteer guide—one of the officials at the camp.

The policemen go out of their way to help a visitor. One of them talked to us for a half hour about things in general while we waited for an open-top bus next morning for a sightseeing trip in Manhattan. In fact, any New Yorker goes out of his way to help a Fair visitor.

We felt so much at home that when we parked our car to catch a bus to the Fair on our first day's visit, we forgot to make a note of where we left it; just walked away from it like we would have done in our own home town. And believe it or not, we found it when we came back in the rain—with the help of some of the passengers on the bus.

Bear in mind that the cost of coming to New York depends on how you are willing to come. We had a camp trailer, slept in it, using a trailer camp once, a cabin one night during a pouring rain, using school grounds twice with the permission of rural neighbors, and parking three times at filling stations. It took us six days to get here.

That $85 is an education worth thousands, for a boy of 11, and worth plenty more for his father and mother.—Reprinted from the New York Herald-Tribune.

Homecoming

Mother was bigger and she could see

When Daddy was down by the poplar tree
And that was the moment when, tender-eyed,
She opened the door and propped it wide
And started the baby on eager feet,— Daddy was coming up the street.

Daddy was weary and shabby too,
But oh, the print of her little shoe
And the welcoming of her tiny hands
Made him monarch of richer lands

Than ever were—and night by night
The little game was their dear delight.

Night by night—till the one when Death
Snatched her up on a laughing breath.
A staggering car that rocked and reared
Free of a lad's light hand that steered
And crushed her lifeless before their eyes,
So little, so eager, so sweet and wise.

Three souls cry out in the little town
When darkness hovers and settles down,
A man who plods from his day's work home
Remembering how he used to come,

A woman who listens with straining ears
And fights the silence with bitter tears,
And a lad with a haggard brow who sees
A baby's ghost in the poplar trees.

Portable Electric Motor Is Ideal Power for Silo Filling

One of many farm chores done more easily and cheaply with electricity.

By IRA MILLER

Rural Electrification Bureau

TO many farmers silo filling is one of their biggest power jobs as well as one of their most expensive operations. This is true if the ensilage cutter is run at too high a speed and with too large a power unit, as such operation requires a large crew of helpers. Thus, in many localities it is not unusual to find 15 to 30-horsepower tractors and crews of 12 to 20 men filling the silo.

Reducing the speed of the cutter increases its efficiency and permits the use of smaller power equipment and a smaller crew. This is particularly important on those farms where high-line electricity is available, as it is the use of small power units that makes electrical energy so economical and practical in the business of farming.

As a matter of fact, it has been the small-farm operator who has really proved the general, practical and profitable use of the small electric motor—usually portable—for silo filling and numerous other tasks. For, working with limited help in most instances, he must utilize his physical strength to its greatest advantage yet not tire himself so greatly that his mind is not clear for planning his work. With electricity, a silo can be filled by a crew of only two men though the operation is not continuous.

Of course, the owner of a large farm likewise greatly benefits from the application and use of electricity. For, using a portable motor to fill the silo, not only can he keep his tractors in the field but also he can reduce the silage crew to four to eight men depending upon the length of haul.

Numerous tests have shown that, using modern ensilage cutters with 12 to 16-inch throats and operating them at speeds proportional to the height of the silo and the diameter of the cutter fan, a portable five-horsepower, 1,800 r.p.m., motor will cut and elevate an average of five tons of ensilage per hour with a current consumption of about one kw.-hr. per ton.

Naturally, the capacity as well as the power required will vary with the length of the cut, the quality of the fodder, the size of the bundles and method of feeding, height of the silo, sharpness of the cutting knives and several other factors. However, under normal conditions and with modern equipment, a farmer can fill his silo electrically at a power cost of three to five cents per ton, depending upon the rate he pays for current. This is approximately one-third to one-fourth the cost of other sources of power for such service. When to these savings are added those resulting from the smaller crews required, it is apparent that a total saving of 15 to 25 cents per ton can be effected by using a portable electric motor for silo filling.

'Fish on Friday' Dates Back Days of Christ

Fish became associated with Friday in a roundabout way. Friday corresponds to the day of the week on which Jesus was crucified and many early Christians observed it as a weekly fast day, that is, a day on which they abstained from eating flesh meats, says a writer in the Indianapolis News. Pope Nicholas (858-867) declared that abstinence on Friday was obligatory on all communicants of the Roman church. Fish is the principal non-flesh meat and accordingly it became the favorite food for those days when flesh meats were forbidden. Later others followed the practice of serving fish almost exclusively on Friday. This is partly out of respect for religious custom; but fish dealers report that many housewives buy fish to be served on Friday because they feel that they can obtain fish of better quality at that time of the week because of the prevailing custom.

The fish was one of the earliest symbols of the Savior of Christianity in general. There were several reasons for this. Fish and fishing played an important part in the daily lives of Jesus and his disciples. Peter and several of the other disciples were fishermen by trade, and Jesus told them that if they would follow him he would make them "fishers of men." The miraculous multiplication of the loaves and fishes, as well as the feast after the resurrection on the shores of Galilee, when some of the disciples ate fish caught by following the instructions of the Lord will be recalled.

The fish as an emblem of Christianity was further popularized by the coincidence that the Greek word for fish, which we render "ichthys," is spelled in Greek with five letters, corresponding to I-CH-TH-U-S, which form what is known as an acrostic; that is, the component letters of the word for fish are the initial letters of Iesusus Christus, THesus Uios, Soter, meaning Jesus Christ, Son of God, Savior.
